Poem

IN THE WHISPER OF THE ANCIENT OAK

-Laldintluanga Chhunthang, XII/B-36

“Will you remember me when I fade into the night?”
she sighed,
“In the echoes of the wind, in the moon’s soft light,”
he replied.

With a tender gaze, she nestled in his arms so tight,
Their love a melody in the silence of the night.

Beneath the ancient oak, a stone guardian stands
tall,

Clasping his beloved’s essence, never to let fall,
Time turned her into bones,
While war turned him to stones,
In his arms she lays
Yearning for happier days,
Still, they find comfort in each other.

A monument to devotion, where love eternally calls,
Their union enduring, beyond mortal walls.

Like the gentle rustle of leaves in a tranquil grove,
Their love persists, a symphony of unwavering trove.

In the quiet refuge of time’s embrace,
Their love, a beacon, transcends all space.
